

RICH SPANISH BEAUTY
IS THE PENNLESS CHILD
OF EAST SIDE COBBLER

Girl Arrested for Theft Made Striking Flash Among Movie Actors.

For a brief time a strikingly pretty brunette of nineteen, who spoke Spanish fluently and said she was the daughter of a wealthy Brazilian coffee planter, created quite a ripple along Broadway, particularly among the handsome juvenile leading men in various moving picture concerns, where she applied for work. She was good clothes, adorned herself with real jewelry, and said that just as soon as her screen would be enough—the money meant nothing.

To-day the wealthy Brazilian coffee planter has been metamorphosed into a shoemaker living at No. 510 East Fourteenth Street. The pampered daughter turns out to be Marie Desmoni, one of his nine children, and she will go to the Yorkville Court on a charge of stealing $300 worth of jewelry and clothes from May Tavis, a guest of the Martha Washington Hotel, No. 29 East Twenty-ninth Street, on March 15.

On complaint of May V. Wilson, No. 248 West Forty-fourth Street, the Desmoni girl was arrested March 8 charged with stealing Miss Wilson's suit case and clothing worth $150. At the station house she gave the name of Ruth Downes, and denied the theft. She was discharged for lack of evidence. Ten days later she was caught with the missing suit case in her possession, and this time, in spite of her protestations that the arrest was due to jealousy on the part of the complainant, she was held in $1,500 bail. She secured that amount in some way and was released.

Next in the plot appears Richard V. Lynch, a motion picture actor, who came to the Second Branch Detective Bureau and disclosed other facts which led Miss Downes to give him, an heirloom in our family," she had called it. The necklace was recognized as the property of Miss Tavis. Investigation showed that a Miss Downes had registered at the Martha Washington Hotel on the night of the theft, and had left that night.

Events moved rapidly then. Somebody who knew the identity of the girl and was jealous of the finery she had acquired, told the detectives her address, telephoned to a drug store at Fourteenth Street and summoned this morning asking that the girl be summoned. She responded to the call and Detective Daly, of the Second Branch Bureau placed her under arrest.
